[ON-SCREEN HEADLINE: ICE Drags Pre-K Teacher Out of Daycare]

GAYLE KING: A federal immigration arrest at a daycare center sparked an uproar in Chicago, a big one. Witnesses say the arrest caused chaos at this facility. Officials say the woman was detained after trying to get away. Ash-har Quraishi has the story.

ASHA-HAR QURAISHI: This video captured the moment ICE agents dragged a pre-k teacher out of a daycare center on Chicago's North Side. She can be seen pleading with the agents as she is pushed up against a waiting sedan. At one point, she shouts in Spanish, “I have papers.”

QUIGLEY: ICE agents followed a teacher into the facility without a warrant and abducted her in front of her students. This woman is a trusted, loved member of her community with a work permit.

QURAISHI: Officials identified the woman as Diana Galeano, a Colombian national in the country since 2023 and seeking asylum. Children, teachers, and parents inside at the time of the arrest say they were traumatized by what they saw.

PARENT MARIA GUZMAN: What has happened today is domestic terrorism, and it is absurd and horrific that they have now targeted our daycare centers.

QURAISHI: Until recently, sensitive areas like schools and hospitals were generally off limits to immigration enforcement. That changed under the second Trump administration. Today’s incident the latest in a string of controversial arrests that have been happening across Chicago as part of the Trump administration’s immigration crackdown. In a statement to CBS News, the Department of Homeland Security denied targeting the daycare center and said Galeano was in a car that sped away from ICE agents and then fled on foot in the daycare center where she was arrested. ICE officials say their operations target specific individuals, not locations, and that agents follow the law. But their tactics have come under fire with critics calling them excessive or dangerous, especially when arrests happen near schools or in public places, Tony.

TONY DOKOUPIL: Ash-har, thank you very much.
