[ON-SCREEN HEADLINE: New at 7:30; Republican Wins Tennessee Election]

GEORGE STEPHANOPOULOS: Will has the headlines, also — starting with that special election in Tennessee overnight, Will.

WILL REEVE: Yeah, good morning, George. It had been a surprisingly tight race in that special election for a House seat in Tennessee's seventh congressional district. President Trump won there by 22 points in 2024, but up until Election Day, Republican Matt Van Epps only had a slim lead and bold-faced names from both parties had campaigned there. And, overnight, Van Epps did win by under ten points and that relatively tight margin a potential warning sign for Republicans ahead of next year's midterms.
