

I've Had It

04/09/26

2:44 mark

5 minutes and 22 seconds

JENNIFER WELCH: Okay, so let me tell you what I've had it with. Okay, I have had it with there being no holiday for non-religious people.

ANGIE SULLIVAN: That's fair.

WELCH: So, we're here. You know, we just had Easter weekend and Passover. And everybody's bleeding in a lot of days out of this thing. I mean, there is a lot of bleeding out of days. The amount of emails I'm sending out. And it's a kickback email. We're closed for Passover. We're closed for Easter. They're bleeding out. I'm talking five, six, seven eight nine days on this thing. It's a — it's holiday abuse on top of the fact that we non-believers, secular people, atheists, agnostic, flying spaghetti monster, what have you, we don't get anything because I want the luxury of being able to say, oh, here's the deal. Sorry, I didn't get your email. I'm having an extended flying spaghetti monster celebration a week. I want the luxury of piling on extra days of not working. And the Christians have it. The Muslims have it. Jewish faith has it. We don't get jack shit. We don't get anything here.

SULLIVAN: Now, and I'm trying to think what we call it, like Good Friday, because everything was closed like Friday and then —

WELCH: Like fuck off Friday. How about fuck off Friday?

SULLIVAN: Fuck you Friday.

WELCH: Yeah, here's the thing with the Passover thing. This thing started, like, on a Wednesday. And then it got some steam. And then it's — it — it — some emails, we got them like how many days does this thing go on? So of course, I started asking the internet and it's — I mean, it's multiple days, multiple days.

SULLIVAN: Not just one day.

WELCH: Yeah, and they — I needed — I need some things to happen. And there's nothing I can do because these people are still on Passover and you can't be the asshole and be like, come on, man, how long? How long does this Passover thing come on?

SULLIVAN: Haven't celebrated your God enough?

WELCH: And here's another thing. Easter Monday, is that new?

SULLIVAN: That's something I had not heard of.

WELCH: Okay, because I remember back in the day, we had Easter on a Sunday, and then we were right at school the very next day. And in the last few years, I've noticed now, it's an Easter Monday. And again, this is a luxury that religious people have now invented a new day to not do anything to alert everybody in their inbox, everybody in their text messages. Anybody that requires a service from them, it's religious holiday, I'm sorry, I can't go to work. I'm observing Easter Monday, which is total bullshit. But I want — I want to do that.

SULLIVAN: Yeah, like a four-day weekend for those of us that have fuck off Friday.

WELCH: Yeah.

SULLIVAN: Fuck everybody. And when you think about it, like banks are closed.

WELCH: I want that.

SULLIVAN: Yes, I want the whole day.

WELCH: Uh-huh. I think it's a huge dick over. And if we had a Congress that wasn't led by an impotent little man, named Moses Mike Grinder Johnson, we could have Congress act on this. This is holiday discrimination.

SULLIVAN: Yes, it is. And it is discrimination.

WELCH: It is discrimination.

SULLIVAN: You're 100 percent right. It is. But you know how they reach around on that is, like public schools are closed Friday and Monday, but they call it like spring festival or something, they just call it something else, but it goes right along with the Easter stuff.

WELCH: Yeah, yeah, well, I'm just telling you in New York, there is, I think, some Passover fraud going on. And I support people celebrating their faith. If you're Jewish, I support all of it, but I've noticed some inconsistencies on the days taken off from person to person. The Christians are slipping in this Easter Monday thing.

SULLIVAN: Yeah, Easter Monday.

WELCH: I'm on the case. I want my days because while everybody's doing all of this stuff, Passover, Easter Bunny, the brand new Easter Monday, we're here talking about all this shit. It's dump truck city over here and I've had it. Like there's no days off. I mean, the devil works hard, but I've Had It works harder. And so, I want my day, weeks. And I want to be able to abuse it the way these people are abusing it. And exploiting the holidays.

SULLIVAN: Right. attach some PTO onto your day.

WELCH: Totally. Yeah, I totally want to do that. I'm so sorry. I mean, I'm adding a couple of extra days here. We're doing an extended celebration of the fact that we don't bite into any of this bullshit.

SULLIVAN: We're calling bullshit on everything.

WELCH: We're taking a science class.

SULLIVAN: We're the biology class right now. We can't [inaudible].

WELCH: We're doing extended study of evolution for this holiday period.

SULLIVAN: Evolution week.

WELCH: There you go. There you go. Darwin week. I think that's a bullshit. It's total bullshit. It reminds me of all of the pre-boarding fraud that goes on at airports. I mean, there's just so much fraud going on at the pre-boarders —

SULLIVAN: I've seen some fraud.

WELCH: — every time I see it. I'm like, that's 12-year-old doesn't need to pre-board. That is complete fraudulent activity. And I think the same type of fraud is going on with these holidays.

SULLIVAN: No, I completely agree. It's ridiculous.

(...)

19:40 mark

1 minute and 14 seconds

WELCH: This is fatherhood as an act of a radical love and resistance. That last slide sounds kind of Jesusy to me. The Jesus character in the Bible, radical impact, radical love. And I just think this is so beautiful that these dads are doing this because regardless of how many laws these politicians make, trans people are going to exist. The suicide rate among this group is astronomically high. And to see these dads, they have a choice, unconditional love and support, radical love, or be dicks like so many people are. Not only are they choosing radical love, but they are putting themselves out there as real men. This is true, unconditional love from a father. And so many of you that might be listening are trans or you might have trans friends or acquaintances, and this is not a time to see this community as a political liability and throw them under the bus. It is a time to advocate and platform for these people. And I just think this group of dads is exactly what I needed in this crazy news week to know that they love their children unconditionally. They don't give a fuck who knows it. And they made a documentary to say fuck you. We love our kids radically unconditionally. Judges all you want to, you're not changing us.

SULLIVAN: No, I thought it was great. I'm really looking forward to seeing it. What makes me so happy about this is what an example to their children about fighting for their children. And then the children learning, you know, I'm worthy because all they hear now is I'm not worthy. And so, you know, parents have to fight for their kids and dads especially with all this so masculinity. It's time for them to step out. So, I just, I think this is really exciting.

(...)

22:34 mark
57 seconds

WELCH: And then you have all of these politicians that make up this crazy lie that there's this woke, gender agenda of furries that use litter boxes that are whacking off weiners in school and all this crazy shit. And the people who wanna brainwash your kids are the book banners.

SULLIVAN: Right.

WELCH: The people who want to indoctrinate your kids are the people that lead with hate and judgment. The people who are preaching equality and radical love and unconditional love, they just want their kids to be who they are and for your kids to be who they are. Even if your kids a little dick, they're not gonna get all up in your business.

(...)

27:17 mark
8 minutes and 20 seconds

"NAT": I'm just sending in this, cause I wanted to share something that happened to me today on, you know, Easter, you know, Jesus' day, obviously. And I was dragged to church this morning, unfortunately, for me, and I never go to church, but of course we had to go because it's Easter, obviously. And so I sat through this hour-long service of this man that was just babbling about who even knows what the fuck. And the entire time I was sitting there was saying this literally tried not to laugh. They're like singing a song about the rattling bones of Jesus. And the entire time I was just like, I could just see Jen's face, like, in my, like, her reaction to what this would be and it was making me laugh. And not only was I dragged to church, following church, we then went to Cracker Barrel. And I was like, this is just, I mean, they're really like, this is the worst prank ever. This is terrible. And when we were in Cracker Barrel, you know, they have all that stupid shit at the front that you can buy, all the little like knickknacks that nobody wants. And we're looking through them and I look over it and just see an entire wall of so many different kinds of Stanley Cups. And again, I just couldn't help but think of Jen and think of, you know, I know she loves her Stanley Cups. You know, that's just her favorite thing. And so, I thought I would just send this in because I thought it was so funny. And I hope everybody had a great Easter because, you know, obviously, I hope everybody went to church and just had such a great time. Because amen, at the end of the day, so that's all.

KILEY JOSEY: And she sent a photo from Cracker Barrel —

SULLIVAN: Oh my gosh.

JOSEY: — of the wall of Stanley Cups.

WELCH: Oh God, that is an abomination.

SULLIVAN: That is —

WELCH: Prayers up to that wall.

SULLIVAN: — I mean, that is [inaudible].

WELCH: That is my worst nightmare. Church leads to Cracker Barrel, which leads to Stanley Cups. It's like an infinite loop of slippery slopes that all lead to MAGA and the death cult. It's a prize she survived quite frankly.

SULLIVAN: She got out of there. Okay, so update for everyone on my Easter Sunday. So obviously, we were in Atlanta, but my mom called and said, "Hey, I want to make plans for Easter." I immediately, I've been waiting for this call. I've been like, here it is, a year in the making. So, I say, I'm gonna be out of town. But even if I was in town, I just don't feel good about going to church with you unless they're talking about how we need to unite against all the injustices people getting shot in the streets of America, little girls getting shot in school in Iran, like, I just can't be in that room unless they do that. The immediate response was, I was only inviting you to dinner on Friday night. And I was like, oh, yeah, I can do dinner on Friday night. And then I get a text the day of telling me not to bring my dogs.

WELCH: Uninvited. They're casually.

SULLIVAN: That was a casualty. I think that was like, fuck you. And then when we sat down, like the whole family was sitting there, extended family, everything. And my mom starts the prayer by saying, "Jesus loves you, even if you don't love him." And I don't, a bunch of other stuff. And then, so when my daughter and I were cleaning up, she leaned into me and said, you know that Jesus comment was directed at you. I was like, of course I know that. So, the new plan is, next year, I'm gonna lead the prayer on some type of holiday. And Jennifer's gonna author it.

WELCH: Yes.

SULLIVAN: Then I'm gonna spill it out. And honestly, I'm here for it. I can't wait. So, that's my Easter update.

WELCH: I think it's a fantastic update. First and foremost, I'm so proud of you for 56 years of capitulating to your mother that you stood up to her. I mean, that's just, I — I've known you for such a long time and the fear in which you operate surrounding her. So, I'm so proud of you for standing up for all of the people that this regime under the veil and the cloak of Christianity as a permission structure to kill people and marginalized people that you stood up. It's, like, a little mini-resistance. So, I'm proud of you for that. Number two, listener. So, she told me the story when we were in Atlanta and I was beaming with pride obviously. But I thought, okay, here's the next phase. So she goes next year to the family prayer and we, as a community, can write the prayer. And so her mom, she'll be like, "okay, I'll start the prayer" and AG can go, "actually, I'll lead." And then we're gonna make the most woke ass, original Jesus, like the Bible Jesus,

SULLIVAN: Yeah.

WELCH: — not the capitalist Republican Jesus, something that that guy would write. And I think it's just gonna be an absolute banger. And then at the end, you can say, "Mom, I didn't hear you say amen."

SULLIVAN: Well, here's the deal. She would totally say amen and not be able, she'd be like, "oh, well, that was a nice prayer." She would be so excited that I said I was leading the prayer. It might irritate her when I came out the other stuff. But here's the thing which I've learned in the course of this whole fiasco about Easter. That, how are you going — I mean, she couldn't argue with me. How are you going to argue if the prayer starts with, please help the children that are hungry because they've no longer been provided any assistance for school lunches or that SNAP benefits were cut? Like —

WELCH: Here's the problem. We need to be more specific.

SULLIVAN: No, no, no, I know, but I'm just saying —

WELCH: It needs to be — and I think it needs to be kind of holy roller, like, "dear Heavenly Father" — is that what — or Jesus? What do you say?

SULLIVAN: I think it's Jesus.

WELCH: Do you go straight to Jesus?

SULLIVAN: I think so.

WELCH: The son? Okay, so dear Jesus Christ —

SULLIVAN: Especially on Easter, Jennifer.

WELCH: Do you say Jesus Christ or just Jesus?

SULLIVAN: Just Jesus.

WELCH: Okay, so Jesus, I want you to lift a hand up and put your hand on all of the children that Donald Trump and his murderous regime have taken food and school lunches and child care away from. Jesus — Jesus just helped these people. Jesus just helped these little children protect themselves from this evil, anti-Christ leader named Donald Trump." How does that go over? If you're real pointed like that.

SULLIVAN: If it was really pointed like that —

WELCH: Do you think you kicked out of the lunch?

SULLIVAN: No.

WELCH: Okay.

SULLIVAN: No, I think it would just be crickets and the whole, if there would just be a ton of tension in the whole house. But I don't think anybody would say, they would never say you have to leave, but I would want to leave because of like how tight it would make everybody.

WELCH: Yeah.

SULLIVAN: I'll tell you who would fucking love it is my daughter. I mean, she would just be like, "Mom, that was a great" — I mean, she would totally do the double down with me.

WELCH: Yeah, I hope that, I mean, really at the thing of this, it's really sad that when you just think about all of the wealth that's been transferred to the worst people in the world and at the expense of these poor kids, because I think your mom at her core, she wouldn't want these kids to not have things, but they're just so indoctrinated and radicalized in this cruel, kind of twisted, mental gymnastics thing. And it's really sad how much religion plays a role in the United States, in marginalizing poor hungry people."

SULLIVAN: Yeah.

WELCH: That's sad.

SULLIVAN: I mean, I think you're right. She wouldn't want any child to go hungry or anything like that, but it doesn't affect her personally. So it's just not a problem that she entertains.

(...)

49:34 mark

1 minute and 40 seconds

WELCH: There's just a mass dehumanization going on in the United States and it's not new. It is something that we just have never reconciled or atoned for. The — all of the mass shootings, they just continue. Nobody does anything about it. The demonization of the poor, the bragged exploitation of immigrant labor, the moral duplicity of people that enjoy all of the benefits and entertainment and spiciness of multi-cultural society, and then do chicken shit stuff like this. And sadly, I have to say growing up in Oklahoma, it's — it's a norm where people see immigrant labor as something to be exploited —

SULLIVAN: Yes.

WELCH: — while at the same time think they're taking away something from them. It's just, it really depresses me to share oxygen with people who enjoy dehumanizing other people so much. The — Trump will die at some point and all of that will go on. It's the cruelty wrapped up with religion and sharing space with these people. It bothers me.

SULLIVAN: Yeah, it's gross. I mean, I was raised in a house that did all these things. And it's — it is so vile and it is so disgusting and the cross couldn't be bigger. So I don't know what, I mean, you know, it's just fucking gross.

WELCH: It is, it's really sad.

(...)

55:44 mark

1 minute and 13 seconds

WELCH: And so you have Trump and then all of these fucking oligarchs with all of these capitalists with no capital that support these people. And they're disconnecting us all and it's just, it's not gonna be good. It's not gonna be good.

SULLIVAN: Okay, so you were in my head, I was driving. There's this piece of shit truck with this big Trump flag on it, driving, turned into a piece of shit house. And I just thought, that's our capitalist, capitalist with no capital right there.

WELCH: It's crazy. It's unbelievable how successful Republican messaging has been to shift the working class voters to think that Donald Trump is gonna help you. Like, it's crazy, but I mean, God, I mean, this is just where we are. But hopefully, I think that if we can get through these elections and I don't know that we will.

SULLIVAN: Yes.

WELCH: I really don't. I mean, I think they're gonna do everything they can. But I think it's gonna be a big blue tsunami, hopefully.

SULLIVAN: I agree, I hope.