[ON-SCREEN HEADLINE: Virginia; Redistricting Vote Passes]

DAVID MUIR: Tonight, a major change to the congressional map in Virginia that could have a big impact on the midterm elections. Voters in Georgia — Virginia, I should say — overnight approving a plan to redraw the map, giving Democrats a better chance at winning ten of 11 congressional districts in Virginia. This measure, passed last night, comes in direct response to President Trump's demand for Republicans in Texas to redraw their map. Some time ago, an effort to pick up more seats in the House for Republicans.
